Discussion Questions

- What has worked in your organizations to both support and focus on the value of the people?
- How has your organization implemented dedicated staffing to focus on people?
- Should NIST's core values more explicitly communicate putting people first?
- What sort of programs or initiatives for building and sustaining a positive workplace community have been successful in your organizations?
 - What are ways that NIST can implement similar programs, including creative approaches towards recognizing and appreciating people, within the constraints of being a federal organization?
